

Wounded Warrior Overcomes Brain Injuries

Family Met their Inspiration at Clearwater Marine Aquarium

Clearwater, FL (April 12, 2019) – In 2005 U.S. Army Sergeant Eric Edmundson was severely injured during his deployment near the Iraq/Syria border. The shrapnel of an improvised explosive device (IED) that detonated under his vehicle ruptured his spleen, broke his patella, fractured his vertebrae and caused him to sustain a traumatic brain injury. While waiting to be transported to a hospital, Edmundson was without a pulse for 30 minutes, causing him to also sustain an anoxic brain injury. The injuries left Edmundson unable to speak or walk, although his cognitive skills remained completely intact. Edmundson, his wife and their two children, Hunter (8) and Gracie (14), have bonded over the inspiration they found through Winter the dolphin's story in the Dolphin Tale movies. On Fri., April 12 Edmundson and his family visited Winter and Hope the rescued dolphins at Clearwater Marine Aquarium. Click here to download video of the experience.

Edmundson was determined to not only survive with traumatic and anoxic brain injuries, but live his life to the fullest and make a difference for others. Through hard work and years of rehabilitation, as well as family and community support, Edmundson is able to communicate through a computer device and has regained some control of his hands. He is also able to occasionally rise and walk a few feet out of his specially equipped wheelchair.

To provide support to his fellow wounded soldiers, Edmundson has learned how to paint with the help of a device that allows him to hold a brush. The proceeds from the paintings Edmundson creates are given to help his fellow vets have meaningful and healing experiences.

Edmundson, his parents, and his 2 children traveled from their home in New Bern, North Carolina to meet Winter and Hope the rescued dolphins during a special encounter at CMA on Fri., April 12 at 10 a.m. For more information contact Julia Anderson at janderson@cmaquarium.org or 727-686-3499.
